

IHT/Mobil road safety award presentation

Devon CC's book on traffic calming, copies of which have been sold around the world, has won the 1992 IHT/Mobil road safety award.

Devon's 9,000-mile road network is the biggest in Britain, and the County Council has played an innovative role in developing methods to control the speed and behaviour of traffic in urban areas. Compiled by County Engineer and Planning Officer Edward Chorlton with members of his staff and South

Bank Polytechnic lecturer Tim Pharoah, "Traffic calming guidelines" is based on a number of successful schemes in Devon and elsewhere in the UK, and case studies from other countries.

It is widely acknowledged as offering the most comprehensive guidelines on traffic calming available in this country and possibly in Europe.

The first 900 copies of the 185-page book, which costs £20, sold out within
